CAMBRIDGE LEAD

TODAY'S statistics show that Cambridge University have won 34 times, Oxford University 29 times and that 17 games have been drawn. This is the thirteenth Inter-Varsity match to be played at Wembley and at this famous venue results have overwhelmingly favoured Cambridge. Oxford's solitary Wembley success was gained in 1956.

SPORT IN THE UNIVERSITIES

By J. D. P. TANNER
Brasenose College, Oxford

FOR some attending this year's University soccer match, the day will be one of light relief from academic cares and responsibilities. Robbins & Hale will be forgotten; the players will almost certainly have neglected their books for at least the last three weeks, thankful no doubt that Sir Edward Hale's suggestions for November-December final examinations are as yet no more than a cloud on their horizon.

When, one wonders, shall we see publication of a report on the future of sport in the Universities? What, in any case, is the purpose and place of sport within the new University framework? We hope such a report might stress the influence of sport on the development of character and on its creation of a competitive atmosphere, in which many have to live their working lives.

In its consideration of Association Football, the report would undoubtedly accord good marks to the University coaching system. The University match always impresses with its competent demonstration of technique. This reflects great credit on the Football Association for the training in teaching methods which it so actively encourages and which its coaches put to such good effect during the short period of the University term.

PERSONAL EFFORT

Nor would the enthusiasm of those participating in sport at inter-university level fail to command attention. One knows from experience just how much personal effort is put into these matches, which are as keenly fought as anything of their kind in the world. At the same time, we wonder whether modern conditions of entry to the universities are not gradually changing things; or whether after entry the intensity of academic pursuits may not preclude sporting endeavour of a kind without which a University background may prove less valuable.

The report would probably include suggestions as to the contribution to be made by the Universities in fostering the best interests of sport. This is the age of training in techniques and of the professional approach; even the current edition of Crockford's refers with some disdain to "amateurishness," albeit in an entirely different field. How best to combine these new attitudes with the integrity previously associated with Amateuism is perhaps one contribution which the Universities should try to make.

HUMAN FACTOR

Another lies in the field of human relations. Whatever the sport, the great majority of officials are unpaid; yet most Clubs incline more and more towards business units, employing as skilled a labour force as they can muster. Indeed, it is surely true to say that Association Football, at its professional level, is one of the most labour intensive industries in the world. It is therefore easy to see how tensions arise and why the human factor is of overall importance.

For those who have no time for such reflections, there is the game itself, the entertainment it provides and the personal memories which in many cases it evokes. It is often fun to ponder on what happened to—. Well, perhaps we shall find out as, reciprocally, we present our own grey hairs for inspection in the Tea Enclosure after the match.

We extend a warm Wembley welcome to our chief guest, Mr. Denis Howell, M.P., Joint Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Department of Education and Science, to whom the teams will be presented before the match.

Introducing OXFORD UNIVERSITY

*D. F. BAXTER (Weymouth G.S. and St. Edmund Hall), Goalkeeper

A scholar in his second year reading Physics. Played for Dorset Grammar Schools before coming up to Oxford. He is an agile goalkeeper with a pleasant West-country drawl.

*W. GROVES (Royal Liberty School, Romford and Keble), Right Back

Played at wing-half for Essex Grammar Schools, but has been successfully converted to full back while at Oxford. A Geologist graduate who is studying for a Diploma in Education. He is also the comedian of the side.

Graduate in History who is also studying for a Diploma in Education. He gained a blue two years ago, but failed to get into last year's side. A strong tackler who also has a fine turn of speed.

*F. I. PARKER (King Edward VII G.S., Sheffield and St. Peter's), Right Half

Another member of the side studying for a Diploma in Education, having graduated in Engineering. A tough, hardworking wing-half who is probably one of the most consistent members of the side. He also has a half-blue for water polo.

T. J. TAYLOR (Bolton School and University), Centre Half

A freshman, doing a three-year course for a Diploma in Philosophy. Strong player with good positional sense and who excels in the air.

*M. BRISTOWE (Barnsley G.S. and St. John's), Left Half (Captain)

This year's captain, in his third year reading P.P.P. Probably the most complete footballer in the side with good ball control and distribution. He captained Yorkshire Grammar Schools, and has also played for Pegasus, Corinthian Casuals and Oxford City.

C. R. TRACY (Lancing and St. Peter's) Outside Right

In his second year reading History. A fast direct player who possesses a good shot. He has won late recognition following outstanding games for the Centaurs XI.

*B. A. HARDCASTLE (Holme Valley G.S. and St. Edmund Hall), Inside Right

Last year's captain, who got a First in Geography and is currently studying for a Diploma in Education. He represented Yorkshire Grammar Schools and has also played for Pegasus and Oxford City. A hard-working inside forward who despite his lack of inches is good in the air. Gains his fourth "blue" today.

P. A. SLATER (Staveley-Netherthorpe G.S. and St. John's), Centre Forward

A Freshman reading Chemistry. He is at present with Chesterfield following a spell with Sheffield Wednesday, and has also played for English Grammar Schools. A strong runner with a powerful shot, who has had the misfortune to miss a number of games this season due to injury.

*R. M. C. GILLIAT (Charterhouse and Christ Church), Inside Left

In addition to being this year's Secretary, is Secretary of Cricket and an Eton Fives "blue." Represented the Public Schools at football and captained their cricket side, and has also played for Corinthian Casuals. An inside forward who has a good turn of speed and a powerful shot. In his second year reading P.P.E.

E. FARR (City of Oxford and Hertford), Outside Left

A freshman doing a one and a half year's course in Soil Science following four years at Edinburgh University. Can play on either wing and is a well-balanced player with a good shot.
